Software

Platform

So far you saw that when it comes to playing roulette at 888 Casino, diversity is the key feature and that you always have multiple options and possibilities.

Firstly, the games are available in instant-play and download mode. This means that you can either play the games directly in your browser, after accessing 888 Casino's website, or you can download a platform that will allow you to play from your desktop.

If you have high-speed internet, then the downloadable files will be downloaded practically instantly.

The platform has been developed internally, by 888 Casino and is solely used for their purposes. Moreover, the download and instant-play versions of the games at 888 Casino are almost the same, so it doesn't really make much of a difference which version you'll choose. In addition to proprietary games, at 888 Casino you can also play games that have been developed by other companies, including some of the top online gaming software developers such as NetEnt and Cryptologic.

Bonuses and

Promotions for the Roulette Fans

The bonuses and promotion offers at 888 Casino have been cherished by players and roulette fans all over the world. More than a dozen bonus and promo offers are available at the casino and most of them can also be used on the roulette games. There are promotions for new players, hot deals, and then daily deals which are available only on certain days of the week or the month. In addition to all that you can collect comp points and redeem them.

The Welcome Package

No-deposit bonus:

Up to 88 Free Spins First-deposit bonus: 100% up to £100 Wagering requirements: 30x bonus amount Bonus validity: 30 days Roulette wagering contribution: 20% bonus package at 888 Casino is truly a warm welcome for all new players. Every new player can earn up to £88 of free play without even having to deposit a single penny. You spin the wheel to determine the size of your free gift. The maximum amount which you can win on any game other than jackpots is limited to the free play won. After that, you can claim the regular welcome bonus at your first deposit, which can be up to £100. The wagering requirements are 30 times the winnings amount, which means that if you've won £10, you would need to wager £300 before you can withdraw. The roulette wagering contribution for this bonus is 20%.

If it sounds unbelievable to you, here is the scheme explained one more time: in addition to the no-deposit offer, new players are also entitled to a 100% match up bonus of up to £100 on their first deposit. This means that 888 would double any amount of money up to £100. So if you deposit £50, you'll be able to play with £100. Wagering on all games does contribute towards the wagering requirements, which in this case are 30x the bonus amount, but different games have different wagering contributions. Roulette contributes 20%, which means that if you wager £50 on roulette, that'll be £10 towards the requirements, whereas live roulette contributes 10%.

Special Promotion for Live Casino Roulette

At 888, there's one roulette promotion that is offered only to players at the live casino. It is a very interesting and unique offer. Namely, you can win £8 every time the ball hits 8. This offer is available between 8 and 9 p.m. Every registered player that places a bet of minimum £8 at the Live Casino Roulette table in 888 Private Room is entitled to the bonus, provided that the winning number in that round was 8.

The wagering requirements are the same, namely, the amount won has to be wagered at least 30 times before it can be withdrawn. Trust me when I say that there's no other casino in the UK which offers a similar promotion. Therefore, if either way your roulette variation of choice is the live-dealer one, why not do it with the possibility of winning something extra?

Other

Bonus Opportunities

We've briefly mentioned the other bonus opportunities available at 888 Casino. There are daily offers for instant prizes, bonus spins, prize draws and much more. This diversified promotional programme is very similar to many other top gambling sites. However, every wager at 888 Casino earns you comp points which can be later converted and used on any game. With the VIP scheme, you could get additional bonuses and promotions, as well as other benefits, such as loyalty rewards. The VIP scheme has three levels – regular, gold and platinum.

888 – Great Choice for All Types of Players

To sum things up, it is clear that 888 casino is a great choice for all roulette fans, regardless of their preferences in terms of the roulette variant (American, European, French), the state of their bankroll and whether they are high or low rollers, whether they prefer classic online roulette or live roulette. At 888 there's truly something for everybody, there's a great game diversity (not only when it comes to roulette) and there's a wide range of different bonus opportunities, many of them available to roulette players. Finally, 888 is compatible with all major types of devices and operating systems.

La música puede mejorar su entrenamiento: aquí le mostramos cómo

Cualquiera que haya levantado una mancuerna o atado un zapato para correr entiende que, en cierto nivel, la música hace que el proceso sea más agradable. Es por eso que la música y el entrenamiento son una combinación exitosa: hay listas de reproducción, clases e incluso géneros musicales emergentes que prometen ayudarlo a empujar para el agotamiento.

En general, hay dos maneras en que la música puede ayudarlo durante el entrenamiento. En primer lugar, ayudándolo a disociarse de cualquier incomodidad que esté experimentando y, en segundo lugar, mejorando la calidad del entrenamiento en sí.

El primero parece funcionar especialmente bien para esfuerzos largos y lentos.

"Deje que la música le haga olvidar el dolor"

"Supongamos que está yendo a trotar", dice el Dr. Matthew Stork, un científico investigador que estudia los efectos de la música en el entrenamiento, "y hay muchas señales internas que están sucediendo – sus músculos están adoloridos, su frecuencia cardíaca está aumentando, está sudando, etc. La música desvía su enfoque atencional de esas cosas, reduciendo su esfuerzo percibido".

Pero incluso podría no necesitar nada melodioso en sus auriculares para que estos efectos entren en juego. "La introducción de otros formatos de audio comunes ha sacudido realmente nuestro conocimiento sobre cómo pensamos sobre la música y el ejercicio", dice el Dr. Christopher Ballman, profesor asociado de kinesiología en la Universidad de Alabama. "Hay individuos ahora que realizan mejor escuchando podcasts o incluso libros de audio – estos ayudan a las personas a disociarse del malestar".

A medida que aumenta la intensidad, la incomodidad se vuelve más difícil de ignorar – pero aquí, la música podría ayudarlo a empujar a través. "Lo que hemos encontrado en pruebas supermáximas – donde los voluntarios básicamente se están empujando al máximo – es que la potencia aumenta con música", dice Stork. "En esos esfuerzos, parece ser más beneficioso como herramienta motivacional. Piense en una pieza como Darude's Sandstorm – hemos visto que solo la anticipación del golpe puede influir en cómo está listo para el ejercicio".

La música puede mejorar su entrenamiento

En cuanto a cómo la música puede mejorar realmente su entrenamiento, las mejoras en la tecnología han facilitado su cuantificación. "Ahora sabemos que la música influye no solo en nuestra frecuencia cardíaca, presión arterial y frecuencia respiratoria, sino también en la actividad eléctrica en el cerebro", dice "Un buen ejemplo podría ser que si estás corriendo y cada vez que llegas a una intersección, encuentras una luz verde, eso sería lo mismo que trabajar de manera sincrónica con música – si estás escuchando música fuera de tiempo, o no tienes música en absoluto, es como constantemente detenerte en luces rojas. Estás trotando, desincronizado". Para entrenamientos cardiovasculares, un ritmo de trabajo óptimo es de 120-140 BPM (latidos por minuto) para la mayoría de las personas, donde es probable que coincida con la frecuencia cardíaca que experimentan. Al mismo tiempo, al menos un estudio sugiere que nos modificamos espontáneamente la cadencia para coincidir con el tempo de la música que estamos escuchando, lo que sugiere que diferentes canciones podrían ayudar a corredores o remadores a cambiar su ritmo.

El ritmo también es importante. "Un ritmo predecible, no demasiado complejo, parece funcionar mejor", dice Karageorghis. "La música clásica y el rock, por ejemplo, a menudo se caracterizan por ralentandos y acelerandos – esencialmente, ralentizaciones y aceleraciones – lo que no es muy bueno si estás tratando de sincronizar tu rendimiento con el ritmo".

Los entrenamientos rítmicos, el rock y la música clásica también comparten lo que los investigadores llaman "claves icónicas". "Estos son básicamente una manera de evocar imágenes a través de la naturaleza de la música", dice Karageorghis. "Así que si tomas algo como la Sinfonía Eroica de Beethoven, eso podría evocar imágenes de trascendencia y superar la adversidad – mientras que una pieza como Eye of the Tiger tiene un riff de guitarra que te viene como un golpe de boxeador y te anima a igualar esa intensidad".

También podrías esperar que el ingenioso juego de palabras de Survivor desempeñe un papel – pero el papel de las letras es uno de los elementos menos comprendidos de los efectos de la música. "En un estudio que hemos completado recientemente, pero aún no hemos publicado, le preguntamos a los voluntarios que eligieran su música favorita para un esfuerzo de levantamiento de pesas, luego les preguntamos si escuchaban una versión regular o instrumental", dice Ballman. "Realmente no vimos diferencias en el rendimiento real, pero a las personas les gustó más la sesión y estaban más motivadas si escuchaban la versión con letras".

"Durante nuestros años de formación, tendemos a formar vínculos bastante seguros con cierta música y letras que personalmente encontramos significativas", dice Karageorghis. "Y así, una canción puede ser muy individual, pero también hay piezas de música que a través de la influencia del grupo peer o el impacto cultural pueden tener un poderoso efecto en nuestra psicología. Se trata fundamentalmente de emparejar a la persona con la situación, la intensidad y el modo de ejercicio".

Todo esto nos lleva al punto crucial de que la música de entrenamiento funciona mucho mejor si realmente te gusta. "Para obtener el máximo provecho de tu entrenamiento necesitas realmente gustar de lo que estás escuchando", dice Ballman. "Hemos publicado alrededor de 15 artículos que muestran que si no te gusta la música que se reproduce, te desempeñas peor – en algunos casos peor que si no hubiera música en absoluto".

De hecho, tal vez lo más importante que puede hacer la música sea hacer que toda la experiencia de hacer ejercicio sea más agradable – independientemente de los mejores personales que establezcas o las piernas adoloridas que experimentes. Eso es crucial, porque disfrutar de los entrenamientos podría ser la mejor manera de hacerlos una parte permanente de tu vida.
